

Creative Nature Photography by Kevin B. MacKenzie

Bring a Little Nature Into YOUR home!

Kevin's interest in photography began around ten years of age when he was introduced to his first SLR camera. His love and respect for New York's North Country also began as a young child as Kevin enjoyed interacting with the different environmental aspects while canoeing, swimming, hiking and biking during his frequent family vacations. The ever-growing appreciation of nature's minutiae as well as grand creations created his spiritual bond to the natural world. He combined this appreciation with an artistic eye and gifted creativity...a winning combination that is reflected in his photographs, poetry and other writings. The wilderness is where Kevin feels most comfortable, closest to God and most connected to his Native American (Algonquin) ancestry.

Though Kevin focuses primarily on capturing extraordinary views of the North Country, his talent is not limited to nature shots alone. He also enjoys taking sports photos varying from the Ironman to surfers in the ocean, photos of special events including martial arts exhibitions and commencements as well as family/individual photos.

Kevin currently lives in the Lake Placid, NY area where he learned and now carries on the family tradition of Adirondack life. In his spare time, he pursues numerous artistic endeavors from web design to woodwork. The majority of his free time, however, is spent trekking amongst the high peaks, lakes, and rivers of the Adirondacks on foot, bike or kayak. Kevin's photos have been featured on the Adirondack Life Online Website and published in The Stump, a SLU student publication. His photos are displayed and available for purchase at several galleries throughout the North Country from Canton to Lake Placid as well as online at www.MacKenzieFamily.com/CreativeNature/, which is continually updated with new photos. If there's something you're looking for, but don't see on this site, email Kevin. A photo may exist for you in the collection or he will notify you when an appropriate image is captured!
